

Goodbye to heroin:

Poem presented by drug docket participant November 18, 2016:

Goodbye to heroin, goodbye drugs and to all my addictions that was.

I am finally done with you and all that you do, finally over the sickness that you put me through.

You came into my life and tore it apart.

You took almost everything and broke my wife's heart.

You dragged me to a different life which had me walking the streets in shame.

I lost about everything and disrespected my father's name.

I begged, borrowed and lied to feel you in my veins and how happy I am to be free of you and released from your ball and chain.
